This year we honour the Islands’ timeless relationship with the sea, and this Festival guide is packed full of hundreds of events taking place across Guernsey, Jersey and the Bailiwick isles of Alderney, Sark and Herm, each of which have their own unique story to tell.

From Roman wrecks to famous seafarers, tales of our Ice Age past to great shipwrecks, our maritime heritage spans centuries.

Find out what is taking place where. From meeting points for walking, cycling coach tours and boat trips to an insider’s guide of the best exhibitions and concerts, enjoy the many events and activities taking place at heritage sites around the Islands, throughout the Festival.

The Channel Islands past is woven into its present and we hope you enjoy the wonderful programme of events on offer as we celebrate our group of small islands with a big history!

2016 sees the launch of the Jersey National Park.

Enjoy a wealth of experiences in stunning settings, from active pursuits like coasteering along the dramatic, rocky North coast, land sailing on the three mile west coast beach or walking along cliff tops overlooking the French coast.

Eat sumptuous local seafood in coastal cafés or Michelin star restaurants and stay in coastal fortifications or quirky historic buildings. The 1,925 hectare park conserves highly sensitive and valuable coastal landscapes vulnerable to change and damage, whilst embracing opportunities for you to enjoy the natural beauty, wildlife and cultural heritage of Jersey, in areas which warrant the highest level of protection.

Launch events will be taking place in the Jersey National Park from 25th April 2016.

As Islanders, the coastline lies at the very heart of our culture, heritage, and indeed our sense of place and identity. From 250,000 years ago when La Cotte de St Brelade sheltered our Neanderthal ancestors, to the strategic advantage we gave to the British Crown, the sea has been instrumental in charting and shaping our future as an Island community. This may be less pertinent today but none the less we are extremely fortunate in having some of the most beautiful sandy beaches and dramatic coastline in the British Isles, providing us with a valuable place for recreation ranging from rock pooling to kayaking, as well as those increasingly elusive qualities of tranquillity and wilderness, which are crucial to our wellbeing. For us the protection of our coastline is of paramount importance, both for our generation and those that follow and so 2016 provides us with a wonderful opportunity to celebrate our coastal heritage whilst engendering further support for our Coastline Campaign. We therefore hope you will join us at one of our special celebratory events during the festival but above all simply take time to enjoy and “breathe in” the Channel Island coastline…trust me you won’t regret it.

Charles Alluto,
National Trust for Jersey, CEO

This year marks not only the 80th anniversary of the National Trust for Jersey, but also the 10th anniversary of our Coastline Campaign and so we are truly delighted to be involved in the Channel Island Heritage Festival which celebrates all things maritime.

"IT’S DIVERSITY AND DISTINCTIVENESS DESERVE ETERNAL VIGILANCE.
IT’S CHAMPION, THE NATIONAL TRUST, DESERVES OUR UNDYING GRATITUDE AND CONSTANT SUPPORT.”

GET A BIRD’S EYE VIEW OF THE WEST COAST

For the first time ever, the general public will be able to access the rooftop of one of Guernsey’s most iconic buildings.

Take in the spectacular West Coast views in this once in a lifetime opportunity to climb to the very top of Fort Grey. Connected to the shore by a raised causeway, the Martello Tower, known locally as the Cup and Saucer, was built on a small islet to defend Rocquaine Bay. Today, it houses a shipwreck museum.

Special access has been granted to visitors on each Sunday throughout April, as well as a guided walk which runs in March and April. Not for the faint-hearted, you’ll need to wear sturdy shoes and be able to climb up a vertical ladder.

GUIDED WALK
Why not find out more about the Fort and its surrounding area, with a guided walk? The Toilers of the Sea and High Earl Grey Tea walk is with Bailiwick of Guernsey Gold Accredited Guide, Gill Girard. The three hour ramble includes sites that inspired Victor Hugo’s Toilers of the Sea, featuring hills and cliff paths traversed at a leisurely pace, finishing with a chance to enjoy exclusive views from the rooftop of Fort Grey with tea and Guernsey gâche.

DISCOVER A ROMAN RUIN
Guernsey’s Roman ship, Asterix, is Britain’s largest Roman object and believed to be one of only two of its type surviving.

A Romano-Celtic trading vessel, Asterix caught fire and sank in St Peter Port harbour around AD 280. It was rediscovered on Christmas Day, 1982, by local diver Richard Keen, and raised between 1984 and 1986.

The original ship was around 22-25 metres long, of which some 17 metres of its lower parts remain. It is the only sea-going Roman ship to survive outside the Mediterranean, other than fragments.

From 1999 to 2014 it underwent preservation work at the Mary Rose Trust. Since its return to Guernsey, work is now underway to create a purpose built home for the Asterix.

The main timbers are now on display in the grounds of the Guernsey Pearl, opposite Fort Grey, and can be seen through a viewing window. There is also a small display that explains more about the ship, how it was built and how it came to sink off Guernsey.

His Island home, Hauteville House, offers fans a chance to experience how he lived - and see where he wrote some of his books and poems. His writing room, the Crystal Room, is at the top of the eclectic house and has panoramic views across St Peter Port, out to sea and across to his homeland, France.

It is not hard to see why Hugo was captivated by the islands. He described them as “fragments of France which fell into the sea and were gathered up by England”. That fusion of French and British culture makes Guernsey unique and its heritage, scenery and people left a lasting impression on the author.

Follow his footsteps with a guided or self-guided walk, visit the bays where he loved to swim and, of course, his home, Hauteville House.

For the duration of the Heritage Festival there will be an exhibition on his remarkable life, marking the 160th anniversary of his purchase of Hauteville House in the Guernsey Information Centre.

Alderney’s main harbour for hundreds of years was at Longis Bay—certainly since Roman times. In the mid-1700s Douglas Quay was constructed and used for privatising as well as general cargo.

In the 1840s, the British Government began the construction of a large harbour at Braye. This decision was followed by the construction

60 YEARS OF THE GERMAN OCCUPATION MUSEUM

This unique Guernsey museum is the life’s work of one local man, Richard Heaume. As a schoolboy, he began collecting spent bullets in the local fields after the plough had gone by. In June 1966 his parents allowed him to use the cottage opposite their house to display his collection. Over the years, his collection has grown with purpose-built extensions added to the small farming cottage. In 1976, the transport corridor and tea room were added and, in 1987, the Occupation Street was built, bringing life under German rule in the Islands to life.

More recently, in 2001, a further small extension was built, housing a thought-provoking prison with information about the Islands’ deportees and the tragic story of those taken away to Auschwitz concentration camp. The museum is now an extensive collection of original Occupation items and documents including many extremely rare pieces.

OCCUPATION AND LIBERATION

With the threat of War edging closer across Europe to the UK, thousands of Islanders were faced with the choice of evacuation or an unknown future. Between 19th and 21st June 1940 just over 25,000 people fled the Channel Islands, many of them children who would be separated from their parents for five years.

On 28th June, St Peter Port harbour came under attack when tomato trucks, awaiting export, were heavily bombed by German aircraft killing 33 people and injuring many more; these attacks then continue at several other sites across the Island. At 9pm, the BBC announced the demilitarisation of the Island. On 1st July, the first military Commander, Major Albrecht Lanz arrived at Guernsey airport.

Over the following five years, Islanders lived under German rule and Hitler focused on building fortifications in the Island to turn the Channel Islands into an ‘Impregnable Fortress’. On 9th May, the Germans finally surrendered to combined British forces and Force 136, led by Brigadier Snow, landed in Guernsey.

Throughout the Heritage Festival, the Museum is offering a 10% discount, just take this guide along when you visit, and show the discount card on the inside back cover.

An exhibition that has opened at the Jersey Museum and Art Gallery sheds new light on Jersey’s Ice Age past.

Jersey: Ice Age Island, sponsored by Capeo Trust, is the culmination of three years of archaeological fieldwork. A team of experts has revisited previous material discovered in the Island, and uncovered exciting new items that redefine our understanding of Jersey’s landscape and human occupation.

Jersey is emerging as an Ice Age jewel and a key location for understanding human evolution, expansion and survival over a quarter of a million years of climate change. The Island’s Ice Age archaeology presented in this exhibition tells us about how our Neanderthal cousins survived in northwest Europe.

The exhibition uses visual and multi-media displays, as well as items on loan from the British Museum and Natural History Museum London to capture the significance of the archaeological material and present it in an engaging and thought provoking way.

Jersey: Ice Age Island is at the Jersey Museum and Art Gallery in St. Helier, open daily 10am to 5pm.

LIBERATION INTERNATIONAL MUSIC FESTIVAL

The 8th Liberation International Music Festival runs from 3rd – 15th May 2016 and explores artistic freedom and the power of music to liberate the spirit in venues across the island.

Enjoy stirring performances from the Band of HM The Royal Marines and a Ballet Gala featuring principals from the Royal Ballet including Lauren Cuthbertson.

On Liberation Day join us for a Musical Walk with a difference in the stunning setting of St Ouen’s Manor. Or come to an “Evening of Musical Velocity” featuring world-class musicians “ZRI” at The Mansell Collection with astounding gypsy music meeting the might of formula one in Nigel Mansell’s trophy room.

Listen to a wonderful evening of music inspired by France with the Jersey Chamber Orchestra conducted by young rising star Daniel Cohen including Beethoven’s Eroica Symphony and Saint-Saëns’ Violin Concerto No 3. Alternatively picnic in the glorious grounds of heritage site Hamptonne and enjoy an afternoon of Jazz with our headline act - award winning pianist, singer & songwriter Joe Stilgoe with his band - for a great family day out.
