Welcome to the 2017 Channel Islands Heritage Festival

The Channel Islands Heritage Festival is a celebration of an archipelago of small islands with a big history.

The islands’ astonishing tides, rich landscapes and colourful histories have drawn people to their shores for centuries. The 2017 festival focuses on the islands’ heroes, myths and legends.

From the first Neolithic settlers to Norse raiders, Romans and even exiled royals, these small yet surprisingly diverse islands have had more than their fair share of adventure and adversity.

Uncover a wealth of stories, from tales of early seafarers to heroic accounts from the German occupation during World War II.

Explore the coastlines for yourself, discover the countryside on foot, by bicycle or join a tour, visit the museums and heritage sites and experience all the drama of the Channel Islands with our programme of festival events.

Each with their own personalities, each with their own stories to tell, discover the history at the heart of the Channel Islands.

Explore Deep into the Bailiwick!

For the first time in decades, the general public will be able to access the Creux Mahie cave in Torteval, Guernsey, once a major Victorian tourist attraction and now a privately owned cavern.
FESTIVAL EXCLUSIVE!

Believed to be the largest cave in the Channel Islands, it measures over 200 feet in length and its height varies from only 5 feet at its lowest to up to 50 feet at its highest. In years gone by, it was once the site of prehistoric artefacts and played host to a range of smugglers’ goods. Nowadays, the cave is believed to be home to a colony of bats. The subject of much folklore, it is said that no one has ever been to the end of this mysterious cavern...

During the Heritage Festival only, this normally inaccessible site has been granted special access for accompanied coasteering and walking tours, operated by Outdoor Guernsey. Each of the tours are challenging, so a reasonable level of fitness and mobility is required, along with sturdy shoes.

Please note: This tour includes a steep descent and ascent over uneven ground. Suitable footwear is needed and a reasonable level of fitness and mobility is required.
Local Heroes of the Occupation

Following their invasion in June 1940, the Channel Islands were the only British territories to be occupied by the Germans during World War Two.

Marie Ozanne
resistance fighter

St. Peter Port’s Liberation Celebration
Under wartime Occupation, the people of Guernsey endured five years of extreme difficulty with little communication with the outside world. Yet even in this dark time courage and resilience prevailed, as a brave few locals became the voice of the many in challenging the oppression of German rule. It is these lesser-known heroic resistance fighters, many of whom lost their lives under German Occupation, that we celebrate as part of the Heritage Festival.

From guided walks and inspiring talks, to striking exhibitions and events which culminate in the Liberation Day Celebrations on May 9th, a poignant time when islanders celebrate their freedom, absorb yourself in the history of our wartime islands.

Whether you choose to...

- Kayak in the footsteps of the First Commando (p31 - The First Commado Kayak Tour)
- Take a walking tour to retrace the steps of Sark’s pivotal wartime raid (p35 - In Search of Commandos)
- Join Dr Gilly Carr for afternoon tea as she recounts the extreme bravery of one local underground wartime journalist (p30 - A Stub of Pencil for a Piece of Bread)

The Heritage Festival comes alive with the heroic voices of our island’s unique past.

In 2017 Sark remembers the 75th Anniversary of ‘Operation Basalt’, a Commando raid which had extraordinary implications for both occupied islanders and the course of World War II. For further details of the commemorative events being held go to visitguernsey.com

Whilst large-scale organised resistance activity was not possible, acts of dissent and disobedience were undertaken by many Islanders at great risk to themselves. This series of short films will introduce you to a selection of important sites intimately connected with stories of Occupation resistance, and give you a sense of the solidarity and patriotism that existed widely in the Island community under these challenging conditions. Please view them in conjunction with the Resistance Trail walking guide which can be collected from any Jersey Heritage site or downloaded.

The Jersey Royal new potato dates back over 130 years, is very much a part of the Island’s heritage, and is widely sought after by locals, chefs and food aficionados alike. The first of arguably only three truly seasonal British lines of fresh produce alongside asparagus and strawberries, Jersey Royals are seen by many to herald the start of spring. In around 1880, local farmer Hugh de la Haye is reported to have had an unusually large potato - from this hear how the Jersey Royal was born. From those early beginnings, the Jersey Royal is today the most significant agricultural export of the Island with around 30 – 35,000 tonnes sold annually. Following an introduction to the company, with a video illustrating the full calendar year, you will then be taken on a guided tour of the grading and packing facility. Limited to a maximum of 16 people only, you will be returned to town afterwards.

This new book about the German Occupation of the Channel Islands is a graphic account of the enormous humanitarian work of the Red Cross, culminating in the life-saving voyages to the islands of the relief ship SS Vega. At the end of 1944 Islanders were close to liberation, but also closest they had ever been to peril as they became isolated from essential food supplies in neighbouring France. The Red Cross, already well-known for their messages of hope, took on the huge political and logistical task of saving the population of the Channel Islands from starvation.
